Requirements

- ▶ Regular attendance; you may miss not more than two classes
- ▶ Active participation ← you must do the assigned readings
- ▶ Otherwise: no credits
- ▶ You Must Read!

“Modulabschlußprüfung” / “Schein”

- ▶ An essay (5 000–6 000 words)
 - ▶ Well structured
 - ▶ Properly referenced
 - ▶ Cleverly argued
- ▶ You will pick an essay title from the list that I will distribute
- ▶ More information: Course outline
- ▶ Your essay is due on August 2, 2010
- ▶ There is just one deadline
- ▶ Should you fall ill between July 1 and August 2,
you must provide a medical certificate

Which parties are we interested in?

- ▶ “Modern” (post 1980) parties
 - ▶ Some are older
 - ▶ But “third wave” began in the 1980s
 - ▶ + many new parties
- ▶ West European Parties
 - ▶ Comparison with Eastern Europe would be highly relevant/interesting
 - ▶ Cf Mudde (2007)
 - ▶ Time constraints + relatively solid knowledge on Western Europe
- ▶ The usual suspects: Freedom Parties (Austria, Norway, Denmark), Front National (Belgium, France), Vlaams Belang (Belgium), Lega Nord (Italy) ...

- ▶ And their voters

What do they have in common?

- ▶ Became successful after 1980; support often very variable
- ▶ Not exactly respected by large parts of elites/citizenry
- ▶ Often dodgy – are they really democratic?
- ▶ Obsessed with immigrants/immigration
- ▶ Often labelled as “Extreme Right”
- ▶ But what is “Right”?

What is Right (and what is Left?)?

- ▶ Multitude of political issues
- ▶ Many (not all) of them two-sided (and gradual)
 - ▶ Spatial representation
 - ▶ E. g. low levels of taxation vs. high(er) levels of taxation
- ▶ High-dimensional “Space” of political ideas and preferences (every issue a dimension)
- ▶ Issues usually grouped together → simplification, fewer (two or three) dimensions
- ▶ Most prominent dimension in European Politics: Left vs. right
- ▶ Employed by journalist, politicians, citizens, scientists

What is Right (and what is Left?)? II

- ▶ Historic roots in French Revolution
- ▶ Two sub-dimensions
 - ▶ Social-moral: “progress” (left) vs. tradition/“roll-back” (right)
 - ▶ Economic: state control of economy (left) vs. free markets (right)
- ▶ Positions on sub-dimensions do not always coincide (CD parties, liberal parties)
- ▶ In postwar Europe, dominance of economic dimension until late 1960s
- ▶ “New” political conflicts → new party families
 - ▶ Green/left-liberal parties (from 1970s)
 - ▶ Extreme Right parties (from 1980)
- ▶ Postwar Extreme Right chiefly “right” in the social-moral sense – more on that soon

What are party families?

- ▶ Degree of similarity between European party systems
- ▶ “Family resemblance” between e. g. German, Belgian and British labour/social-democratic parties → social-democratic party family
- ▶ Delineation of party families
 1. Name
 2. Ideology
 3. Membership in international federations; co-operation
 4. History and social base (cleavages)
- ▶ Extreme Right family – tricky

Labels. . .

- ▶ How should we label the party family?
- ▶ Multitude of labels renders them next to useless: Extreme Right, Radical Right, Populist Right, New Populism, Anti-Immigrant Populism, Neo-Fascism, Nativism, Racism . . .
- ▶ Sub-groups within party family make things worse
- ▶ Extreme Right label arguably most popular in the literature

Right-wing extremism vs. The Extreme Right

- ▶ Radicalism:
 - ▶ Being close to a pole of an ideological dimension
 - ▶ A relative category
- ▶ Extremism
 - ▶ The closing down of the marketplace of ideas, anti-pluralism (Lipset and Raab, 1971)
 - ▶ Any ideology that is opposed to the democratic rights of its adversaries
- ▶ In short, the opposite of liberal democracy, thereby an absolute category
- ▶ Some Extreme Right parties are extremist, but not all (or the majority) of them
- ▶ This is my reading, but others use other definitions
- ▶ This can be confusing, so we need to be somewhat clearer about definitions

Labels. . .

- ▶ How should we label the party family?
- ▶ Multitude of labels renders them next to useless: Extreme Right, Radical Right, Populist Right, New Populism, Anti-Immigrant Populism, Neo-Fascism, Nativism, Racism . . .
- ▶ Sub-groups within party family make things worse
- ▶ Extreme Right label arguably most popular in the literature
- ▶ Various strategies for defining the Extreme Right (Mudde, 2007, pp. 13-15)
 - ▶ Family resemblance, ideal types and prototypes
 - ▶ Minimal definition: finding things that all members have in common (lowest common denominator)
 - ▶ Maximum definition: largest number of similarities within (part of) the family

Minimum Definition

- ▶ Features of all parties generally considered part of the family

Minimum Definition

- ▶ Features of all parties generally considered part of the family
- ▶ “Nativism” (Mudde, 2007, pp. 18-20)
 - ▶ States should be inhabited exclusively by members of the native group; non-native elements (persons/ideas) threatening to the homogeneous nation-state
 - ▶ More specific than nationalism
 - ▶ Not necessarily racist (“equal but different”)
 - ▶ More general than anti-immigrant

Minimum Definition

- ▶ Features of all parties generally considered part of the family
- ▶ “Nativism” (Mudde, 2007, pp. 18-20)
 - ▶ States should be inhabited exclusively by members of the native group; non-native elements (persons/ideas) threatening to the homogeneous nation-state
 - ▶ More specific than nationalism
 - ▶ Not necessarily racist (“equal but different”)
 - ▶ More general than anti-immigrant
- ▶ Family of ethnic parties
- ▶ Probably best attempt to capture what family members in Western and Eastern Europe have in common

Maximum Definition

1. Nativism
 2. Authoritarianism (Mudde, 2007, pp. 22-23)
 - ▶ Not referring to non-democratic regimes
 - ▶ A psychological construct going back to Adorno et al. (1950)
 - ▶ The belief that “authorities should be trusted to a relatively large extent . . . they are owed obedience and respect” (Altemeyer, 1981, p. 151)
 3. Populism
 - ▶ A style
 - ▶ A (thin) ideology: “common sense”; “the corrupt elites” vs. the “pure people” – can clash with authoritarianism
- ▶ Applies to a large sub-group within the party family

Mudde: “Populist Radical Right Parties”

- ▶ “Extreme Right” reserved for anti-democratic parties (Mudde, 2007, p. 24) – departure from his earlier work (e.g. Mudde, 1996)
- ▶ Radical Right: nativism + authoritarianism
- ▶ Populist Radical Right: + populism → maximum definition
- ▶ Interesting, relevant and influential work, but I rather stick with “Extreme Right”
- ▶ Or simply nativist parties?
- ▶ Mudde (1995): We know who they are, even if we do not know what they are ...

The Extreme Right, old and new

- ▶ Back in the 1980s, 3rd wave of electoral success (mis-)understood as revival of interwar Extreme Right (“return of the fuhrers”)
- ▶ Later, “old vs. “new” Extreme Right (subgroups, Ignazi and Ysmal)
- ▶ In fact, most (not all) contemporary Extreme Right groups different from interwar Right, because the environment has changed
- ▶ More on that next week

Conclusion

- ▶ Emergence of a “new” party family in Western Europe during 1980s
- ▶ Core feature: nativism, opposed to immigration from outside Western Europe
- ▶ Heterogeneous party family with fluent borders and many labels
- ▶ Borderline cases and definitional chaos
- ▶ Permanent presence and policy impact in many countries
- ▶ Its rise can be explained by both demand and supply side factors

For next week

- ▶ Mudde (2007, ch 1+2) to get a clearer idea of what this is all about
- ▶ Blinkhorn (2000) for a compact presentation of the Extreme Right between 1919-45
- ▶ Prowe (1994) for a relatively early comparison of old/new right-wing groups
